THE RIVER IS FALLING

And Getting Down to a Record Breaking Stage or Near It.

ONLY TWO PACKETS ARE RUNNING

And They are Having a Tough Experience—The Longest Spell of Extreme Low Water Ever Experienced on the Upper Ohio—The Virginia will be Commanded by Captain Calhoun—News of the River and Rivermen.

The upper Ohio river has made a record for itself in the way of a continuous spell of extremelow water. It was in the first week of June that the big packets of the Pittsburgh and Cincinnati line were compelled to lay up on account of lack of water and not one of them, Keystone State or Hudson, has turned a wheel since. True, the smaller packets on the upper river, including the Lexington, C. H. Woods, Favorite and Jennie George, have managed to make their trips, but there has been no regularity or certainty, and practically the river has been closed to navigation since June, longer than ever before in the history of steam navigation on this end of the Ohio.

The Lexington is one of the lightest draught boats on the river, but Captain Cline had to retire her, and now her successor, the C. H. Woods, has also been laid up by low water, leaving but two boats running, the Favorite in the Matamoros trade and the Jennie George in the Liberty's Clarion trade. Both these boats are very small, having been brought here from the Big Sandy, noted as a stream with the smallest steamers of any inland stream in this country. It has not been uncommon lately to see either of these boats pulled up by horse power over the shoals below Me-Mechen.

Rivermen have tired of predicting a navigable stage of water and are philosophically waiting for the rise which is sure to come sooner or later. Though the weather was threatening yesterday nobody really expects there will be any water before the first of next month. With the advent of water the upper river will be thronged with boats. To begin with there is 33,000,000 bushels of coal harbored at Pittsburgh ready for shipment south by water. If all of this gets away in a week the towboatmen will be lucky. With an average of 150,000 bushels to a tow that means 220 towboats will go out of the Smoky City with coal. In other words, the upper river will be almost covered with tow. Never before was there nearly so much coal ready for shipment.

The new Virginia, it is announced, will not be ready to enter her trade between Pittsburgh and Cincinnati before the first of November. Captain Thomas S. Calhoun, late of the Keystone State and Iron Queen, has been slated for the captaincy of the new steamer, and no better choice could have been made, for there is no more popular commander on the Ohio. "Old Reliable" Robert H. Kerr, late of the Iron Queen, will preside in the office as chief clerk, and the pilot will be Sanford and Ollum, transferred from the Keystone State.
